Note that the practice of taking 8 precepts for one day also exists in the Hinayana tradition. The only real difference lies in the fact that the practitioner does not generate the Mahayana motivation. (Also fully ordained monks and nuns cannot take these precepts as they would be lower than their ordination.)

INTRODUCTION

The Eight Mahayana Precepts are taken for twenty-four hours. It is especially good to take them on full and new moon days and on special Buddhist days (see the Tibetan Calendar).

The essence of this practice is to be mindful of the Mahayana motivation to take these precepts in order to lead all sentient beings to enlightenment.

Observing precepts for even such a short time has tremendous benefits: one accumulates a great amount of positive potential (merit) in a short time. One will receive pleasant rebirths and eventually will attain enlightenment. One is protected from harm and the place where one lives becomes peaceful and prosperous. One's mind is peaceful and calm; one gains control over one's bad habits; there will be fewer distractions when meditating. One gets along better with others. One will remember the Buddha's teachings in the future and can be born as a disciple of Maitreya Buddha.

The eight precepts are:

- Avoid killing, directly or indirectly.
- Avoid stealing, and taking things without the permission of their owner.
- Avoid sexual contact.
- Avoid lying and deceiving others.
- Avoid tobacco, alcohol, tobacco and drugs (except for medicinal purposes).
- Avoid eating more than one meal that day. The meal is taken before noon, and once one has stopped eating for thirty minutes, the meal is considered finished. At other times of the day one can take light snacks, but not solidized whole milk or fruit juices with pulp. Avoid eating biscuits, meat, eggs, onions, garlic and radishes.
- Avoid sitting on a high, expensive bed or seat with pride. Also avoid sitting on small chairs.
- Avoid wearing jewellery, perfume, and make-up. Avoid singing, dancing or playing music with attachment.

For a precept to be broken completely, four conditions must be present:

- The motivation is a negative attitude such as attachment, anger, etc.
- There is an object of the action, e.g., a being that is killed or an object that is stolen.
- One does the action. If one tells someone else to kill, steal or lie, it is also a transgression.
- The action is completed, e.g. the living dies before oneself or one thinks, "This is mine."

The first time one takes the precepts, it is done from a master. Thereafter, one can do the ceremony before a Buddha image by reciting it as the actual Buddha.

The Essence of the Eight Mahayana Precepts

The Eight Mahayana Precepts are an extension of the Five Lay Precepts observed in Theravada Buddhism. They encompass:

1. Refraining from killing
2. Refraining from stealing

3. Refraining from sexual misconduct
4. Refraining from lying

In addition to these core precepts, the Mahayana tradition introduces three additional precepts:

5. Refraining from consuming intoxicants
6. Refraining from slander
7. Refraining from covetousness

The Practice of the Precepts

According to Geshe Sonam Rinchen, the practice of the precepts involves three essential components:

1. Taking the precepts: This formal ceremony marks the commitment to observe the precepts and signifies a step towards the Buddhist path.
2. Maintaining the precepts: This requires ongoing effort and mindfulness to uphold the precepts in daily life.
3. Restoring broken precepts: If a precept is broken, it is crucial to acknowledge the transgression, purify the negative karma, and recommit to observing the precepts.

The Benefits of the Precepts

Observing the Eight Mahayana Precepts brings numerous benefits, including:

- Cultivating ethical conduct and reducing negative karma

- Developing compassion and empathy towards all beings
- Promoting mental clarity and emotional stability
- Creating a foundation for spiritual growth and liberation
