The twins, who were born conjoined at the chest and abdomen, underwent a groundbreaking 24-hour procedure at the Children's Hospital of Philadelphia.

The surgery was a success, and Bella and Hope were finally able to live independently.

In the year since their surgery, the twins have made remarkable progress.

They are both thriving and developing normally.

Bella and Hope are now able to sit, stand, and walk on their own.

They are also starting to talk and interact with others.

The twins' parents, Amy and Joe Renz, are overjoyed with their daughters' progress.

"It's been an incredible year," Amy said.

"We are so grateful for the doctors and nurses who made this possible."

The Renz family's story is one of hope and inspiration.

It shows that even the most challenging obstacles can be overcome with love, determination, and a little bit of magic.

The Book

In their new book, Little Fighters: Miracle Conjoined Twins One Year On, the Renz family shares their incredible journey.

The book is full of heartwarming stories, inspiring photos, and medical insights.

It is a must-read for anyone who is interested in the power of the human spirit.
